PRANONE

(ANHYDROHYDROXY-PROGESTERONE) ORALLY

The continuing success of Pranone* and Proluton* in sparing hundreds of women the disaster of abortion and many disabling menstrual disorders appears to be anchored in two properties of the corpus luteum hormone: an inhibiting action on abnormal uterine contractions[1] and production of a secretory endometrium.[2]

"of unquestionable value"[3] in threatened abortion

The action of progesterone was demonstrated as early as 1934. It was discovered that pituitrin-induced contractions of the uterus could be quieted in five minutes with corpus luteum hormone. Employing this "hormone of pregnancy" to prevent threatened abortion, 86 per cent salvage in a group of women who had had 85 per cent failures was obtained.

In a more recent report of 500 cases,[4] it has been stated that when progesterone was used to prevent abortion, fetal salvage was 85 per cent, whereas when it was omitted, salvage dropped to 40 per cent. When progesterone was again included, fetal salvage again rose to its previous high. Using Proluton as the only therapy for patients threatening to abort, Mason[5] was able to bring 30 of 34 successfully to term. Achieving equally gratifying success with Pranone and Proluton in their series of 50 cases, Krohn and Harris[6] point out that even in large doses these preparations are innocuous. A patient who received as much as 65 mg. of Proluton and 560 mg. of Pranone in 19 days not only had no ill effects but rather was saved from "what was first considered an inevitable abortion."[3]

Because corpus luteum therapy should be started at once if abortion is imminent, many physicians advise patients to keep a supply of oral Pranone on hand for emergency use. Soule's[3] study of 13 cases shows that Pranone in proper dosage (approximately 5 times that of progesterone by injection) can be as effective as Proluton intramuscularly in forestalling spontaneous abortion.

progesterone for "every case of habitual abortion*"[7]*

Terming corpus luteum therapy "most satisfactory," Taussig[7] has advocated that it be used routinely in habitual abortion. To provide maximum protection, Pranone and Proluton are now being widely prescribed as soon as pregnancy is diagnosed,[5] a procedure with which Mason[5] obtained 88 per cent completed pregnancies in women with previous histories of one to three abortions.

PROLUTON

(PROGESTERONE) INTRAMUSCULARLY

Rutherford[8] also reports encouraging results with Pranone and Proluton administered before conception. Quigley,[9] Krohn and Harris,[6] and Kotz, et al.,[10] likewise noted a high degree of fetal salvage with progesterone. Vaux and Rakoff[11] favor Proluton in combination with Progynon-B* (estradiol benzoate). With this technic they achieved 69 per cent fetal salvage in 35 pregnancies in contrast with a previous salvage of 11 per cent in 118 untreated pregnancies. Twenty-eight of these 35 patients had had no living children, prior to Proluton—Progynon-B therapy. White[12] and Schmitz[13] have found that estrogen-progesterone therapy is highly effective even among diabetics, in whom a normal obstetric course "is almost conspicuous."[12] A combination of Pranone and oral estrogens has long been used by Hamblen.[14]

simplicity, harmlessness and low cost in dysmenorrhea

When any treatment repeatedly approaches 75 per cent success in warding off the "bugbears of gynecology"[15]—functional dysmenorrhea—it is definitely worthy of trial. Harding,[2] Greenblatt, et al.,[16] Soule,[17]—all report that 7 out of 10 women had less painful menses after they had received Pranone Tablets prophylactically. Observing 104 patients, Harding[18] finds that not only is pain alleviated safely, but also absenteeism is markedly decreased. Heckel[19] notes that as little as 10 mg. Pranone daily for a week premenstrually may protect against dysmenorrhea—"a simple and inexpensive form of endocrine therapy."[2]

frequent relief from premenstrual tension

Abnormal irritability and depression which so often precede the menses may also have their origin in corpus luteum deficiency.[15] Whatever the exact etiology, these symptoms as well as associated menstrual headache, mastalgia, and gastric distress are often relieved by Pranone Tablets administered premenstrually.[2,16,17]

for young women with meno-metrorrhagia

"Perhaps the most striking application" of progesterone therapy, and "certainly the most important and specific one," is in functional uterine bleeding, Hamblen[14] declares. Pranone used cyclically with oral estrogens "saves many young women the rigors of repeated curettages and the disastrous recourse to radium and roentgen therapy or hysterectomy."[14] Jones and Te Linde[20] found that the incidence of hysterectomy and irradiation dropped from 37 per cent to 7 per cent when anhydrohydroxy-progesterone was used cyclically. Unlike testosterone, Pranone is advocated not for checking immediate hemorrhage but rather as an "extremely valuable" preventive measure.[20] Persistent anovulatory bleeding was relieved in eight patients, Crossen[21] observes, by means of anhydrohydroxy-progesterone. Allen[22] and Heckel[19] consider that Pranone Tablets are as effective as curettage in controlling bleeding in selected cases.

DOSAGE

The dosage may be varied according to the needs of the individual patient.

Threatened Abortion: Proluton 5 to 25 mg. intramuscularly, daily, until pains and bleeding stop; then treat as for recurrent abortion.

Alternately: 5 or 10 mg. Proluton intramuscularly three times weekly, increasing to 25 mg. intramuscularly every 24-48 hours during calculated menstrual periods and times of stress.

Dysmenorrhea and Premenstrual Tension: Pranone 5 to 10 mg. one to three times daily; or 1 or 2 mg. Proluton intramuscularly, daily, for eight to ten days preceding onset of expected menses.

Meno-metrorrhagia: Pranone 10 mg. two to three times daily, or 2 mg. Proluton intramuscularly, daily, for last ten days of cycle.
